

Emma Deakin Biography

Head Physiotherapist and Medical Lead British Triathlon Federation.

After completing her undergraduate degree at Nottingham University Emma moved to Germany to work for the British Army. On her return Emma studied for her masters in sports physiotherapy and manual therapy through Sheffield Hallam University and completed her placement to be registered with the MACP in 2003.

She joined the EIS (English Institute of Sport) from the Northern Ballet Theatre in 2007 and took up a role with multisport and British Swimming. Emma supported the British swimming team during the 2008 Beijing games and led the open water team of 3 athletes, who all medalled at the games.

Emma moved to Lead Physio at British Triathlon in 2009 and was part of the support team which helped the athletes to achieve the sports first Olympic medal success in London 2012, and continued medal delivery at the Rio 2016 games.

As well as contracting for the RFU as part of their ICIS medical trauma faculty, Emma is currently Head physiotherapist and medical lead for British Triathlon.
